Since a decade the Sahel region is in a sociopolitical and security turmoil with escalating terrorist attacks, deadly violence, community conflicts, and national political crises, including coups d'état. Multiple insecurities are framing the understanding of the region. Yet citizen mobilizations and popular struggles for change are also part of what is currently going on. Hence, alongside with understanding current insecurities, this round-table explores opportunities in the Sahel. Participants are scholars with long-term research on the ground.

Chair: Sten Hagberg

Participants: Diana Ayeh, Virginie Baudais, Ludovic O. Kibora, Yaouaga Félix Koné, Mariame Sidibé, and Aly Tounkara
